River City . . .

Back in 1699 the French explorer Iberville pushed his way into an Indian encampment where he spied a tall red cypress stripped of its bark. He simply said, "le baton rouge", and the name stuck. Baton Rouge was first settled by the French in 1719, but didn't become a city until 1817.

Zachary Taylor, the twelfth President of the United States, was living in Baton Rouge at the time of his election in 1848.

From 1849 Baton Rouge served as the state's capital, except from 1862 to 1882, when the government moved to Shreveport and New Orleans. No other American town has changed allegiance as often as Baton Rouge, saluting both the tri-color and fleur de lis of France, the orange and red of Spain, England's Union Jack, the flags of the Republic of West Florida, the state of Louisiana, the confederacy and finally the Stars and Stripes.

Overall, Baton Rougeans are a mixture just like in every other city in the United States. But River City is also home to many Cajuns and Creoles — people of mixed French, Spanish and Negro ancestry.

Built on the first highlands above the Gulf of Mexico, the River City is almost flood proof. It is 55 feet above sea level and 27 feet above the river.

The industries of Baton Rouge depend upon water. It is water in the form of the mighty Mississippi River which flows past Baton Rouge, pouring out 308 billion gallons daily, bringing freighters to the fourth largest port in the nation. This port, even though it is the farthest inland deep-water port on the Gulf of Mexico, has become second nationally in grain handling operations.

It was also in Baton Rouge that rubber was first produced from petroleum. Today the city is a major center of the south's petrochemical industry.

But the petrochemical plants aren't the largest employers of Baton Rougeans. First comes the state government, closely followed by Louisiana State and Southern Universities, next the local government, then the plants, construction industries, and lastly the retail outlets. Cortana Mall, well-known to Baton Rouge shoppers, is the tenth largest shopping mall in the United States.

This is the city, Baton Rouge, Louisiana. A population of 209,317 with city limits extending 60.5 square miles, this southern city serves as the center of the state government. It is filled with history, industry, entertainment and controversy.

Louisiana Elects Republican Governor

R. Scheuermann

J. Wozniak

For the first time in over a century, Louisiana elected a Republican governor, Dave Treen of Metairie.

In the hotly-contested election, Jimmy Fitzmorris, narrowly defeated by Louis Lambert in the primary, filed suit claiming that voting irregularities had interfered with the outcome. Fitzmorris lost, after appealing to the Louisiana Supreme Court.

All five defeated Democratic candidates crossed party lines, two of whom, Bubba Henry and Sonny Mouton, were censured by the Democratic State Central Committee for endorsing Dave Treen. Another election hotspot was the bugging of Candidate Paul Hardy's state campaign headquarters.

All said and done, it was the most expensive election that Louisiana voters have witnessed in recent years, with expenditures for all candidates reaching over $17 million.

Tragedy Takes Life of Bo Rein

The Board of Supervisors selected Bo Rein of North Carolina State as the successor to Coach Mac on November 30, 1979. Forty-two days later, Rein died on a recruiting trip. His plane flew over 1,000 miles off-course before crashing in the Atlantic Ocean. Failure in the airplane's oxygen system was later speculated as the cause for the crash.

Ossie Does It Again!

Under pressure from District Attorney Ossie Brown and religious groups, "Life of Brian", Monty Python's religious satire dealing with the life of a man born during Christ's time, was essentially exiled from Baton Rouge. Cortana Cinema's booking agency decided not to show the film.

Later, Ossie did it again. Upon his recommendation, the Baton Rouge City and Parish councils passed a six month liquor moratorium on the issuance of new beer and liquor permits.

The District Attorney drew heavy criticism from LSU students when he proposed a ban on the sale of drug paraphenalia in East Baton Rouge Parish.

Soileau, a small community in Allen Parish, celebrates Fat Tuesday a little differently than the French Quarter crowds.

Instead of gaily trimmed floats, costumed revelers and plastic beads, Soileau's parade is a caravan of dusty trucks and cattle trailers. The men of the town, both young and old, ride in the trailers to each home, collecting ingredients for a huge gumbo. The oldest among them is elected "El Capitan". It is he who approaches the lady of the house. She may be generous enough to contribute a chicken which, of course, the crew must first catch and pluck before throwing in the pot.

As the day draws to a close, the giant gumbo is cooked and consumed by everyone in the town. A Cajun band then strikes up the dancing, which lasts well into the Soileau Mardi Gras night.

If we didn't have dependable people to experiment with new pesticides, fertilizers, hybrids and growing procedures, our method of plant production might still be what it was twenty or thirty years ago.

The Horticulture Department at the LSU is improving plants through genetics. The production of stronger, healthier and more adaptable plants is necessary in the unpredictable Louisiana climate. The LSU department can be credited for many new varieties of sweet potatoes, tomatoes, beans, cabbage, okra, and peaches.

Horticulture also develops pesticides for home and commercial use and recommends which ones are best for Louisiana. Two such pesticides promoted by LSU have been Malation, a pesticide used for killing insects, primarily the aphid which sucks the juices of plants, and Biazianon, a pesticide used to kill leaf minors. These pesticides are now USDA-approved and are available to the public.

Since soils are not perfect, the Horticulture Department tests fertilizers to rate their relative safety.

The department is not only concerned with growing plants, but also with various methods of processing them. Fruits and vegetables are canned, frozen and prepared during experiments, then later evaluated for taste, color, texture and freshness.

"It could be a bonanza," said Dr. Rex Pilger, associate professor of geology, about a research project studying some unconventional sources of methane (natural gas) in the Gulf coastal offshore area. The project, which is supported in part by a U.S. Department of Energy grant, will determine the feasibility of natural gas as an alternative energy source. If successful, Pilger said "It could provide a very important solution to the energy problem facing us."

Three geology faculty members head the research team which is studying the size of the sand reservoirs where the natural gas is found, the speed of the water flow, the salinity (salt content) and the amount of methane in the water.

Dr. Pilger and his crew oversee the geophysical aspects of the project. Dr. Ferrell tests the sands that make up the clays and Dr. Kupfer evaluates the structural development of the Gulf coast. Several students are also involved, both graduate and undergraduate.

Well logs from oil wells provide research data. Several laboratory exercises are also used to analyze sediment and water samples. Pilger believes that even if their research project doesn't prove that this unconventional natural gas is feasible as an energy source, it will provide a better understanding of the sedimentary processes involved in the Gulf coast.

They may not compete with Mork and Mindy for the number one spot in the Nielsen TV ratings, but two made-for-television films developed by the LSU Economics Department are certain to make it big in the academic world! The films, each approximately one half-hour long, were primarily designed to train grade school and high school teachers to incorporate basic economic principles into their daily lessons.

Bob Smith, LSU professor of economics working with other faculty members in the business school, said the films are part of a program developed to teach teachers to in turn educate students with the American economic system. "The student gains insights into how economics relates to his other courses in school," Smith said. "For example, a history teacher should point out the economic aspects of the Civil War.

Both films, which will air on the Baton Rouge public TV Station in late 1980, were professionally produced and filmed in the Capital City. Grants from the Louisiana Board of Education helped the Business School to fund the project.

D. Bush, Science and English Poetry, 1950.

Three hundred years ago, Hans Lippersky discovered the principle of the telescope while gazing through a lens he had lifted to the sky. Forty years ago, the LSU campus was endowed with an application of the Dutchman's efforts — a 12-ton domed observatory atop Nicholson Hall.

At a cost of $25,000, the copper-plated observatory became the 224th of its kind in the world. In addition, the 11½-inch refracting telescope within the structure was once the third largest telescope in the southern United States. Weighing three tons and measuring fifteen feet in length, the telescope served in gathering information about the sun and its satellites.

Today, however, with the new processes and machinery available to the astronomer, the Nicholson Hall observatory is used primarily by the public on Fridays. With it, the student and non-student can view all the planets except Pluto.

Auxiliary pieces can be added to the telescope to instruct the starry-eyed student. The camera is often used to photograph various star clusters, quasars, nebulae, and the moon. To calculate distances, the photometer that measures the brightness levels is attached to the telescope.

LSU has another observatory in Clinton, Louisiana. Located approximately 35 miles from Baton Rouge, the Clinton complex has a 36-inch reflecting telescope with ten times the light-gathering power of its baby brother. Because of its size and location away from the city lights, the Clinton observatory is frequented by faculty and graduate students who are studying astronomy and astrophysics.

"Energy is the primary concern for the nation in the coming decade. The energy used in buildings accounts for 35-50% of the nation's energy consumption. Therefore research is the primary topic of concern among designers, users, and contractors." This statement, made by Dr. Jason C. Shih, Director of the School of Architecture, sums up the major objectives of the School of Architecture and the Office of Building Research at LSU.

The Office of Building Research has conducted many energy-related projects. Two of them dealt with the development of lighting and thermal standards for new and existing buildings in Louisiana. These projects were designed to initiate legislation for thermal and lighting efficiency standards in buildings made possible by grants from the Louisiana Department of Natural Resources, these projects were incorporated into a series of energy-related seminars conducted throughout Louisiana. Classes given at the seminar were funded by the U.S. Department of Energy, under the authority of the Louisiana Department of Natural Resources.

The summer of 1979 was very beneficial for some 80 mildly handicapped children and 19 teachers because of a program conducted by the Department of Human Development within the LSU College of Education.

The seven week program, the only one reported in Louisiana, was designed to help mildly handicapped students maintain their academic skills over the summer and to serve as practical training for special education teachers who work with them.

The program was LSU's first endeavor to provide instruction for handicapped children. Dr. Emma Jo Crain, coordinator of the program, said, "The majority of the children who were involved made significant, measurable progress in all academic areas."

"Research data shows that the children did maintain skills from May 1979 to October 1979," said Crain.

Three teachers were each assigned to 15 students, giving instruction in language arts, mathematics and the humanities. For some of the teachers the program was a practicum which fulfilled requirements for a master's degree in special education.

J. Wozniak

Soaring prices of conventional energy sources have prompted the research and development of alternative fuels. Controversy surrounds the use of nuclear energy, which may be discontinued due to the potential dangers associated with it. Other sources, such as geothermal and wind power, have many drawbacks that make them infeasible at this point. However, there is one source of energy that has been the subject of a great deal of study the past ten years. It does not have to be pulled out of the ground; it is so natural that flowers can grow in its midst. This source is the energy of the sun — solar energy.

Until recently, solar power was difficult to harness and use at an affordable cost on a large scale basis. Massive mirrors or silicon cells were needed to capture the sun's rays. Now, a new material made essentially from wood pulp has been developed by Dr. Clayton D. Callihan, a professor of chemical engineering. This material, called desiccant, works by using the natural humidity in the south's air. The desiccant absorbs the water held in the air and condenses it. As the water condenses, it gives up its latent heat. The air is thus warmed and circulated through the house. To cool the air in the summer, the process is much the same way, but is a more involved procedure. The sun is used to rid the desiccant of additional water. Dr. Callihan's Chemical Engineering 4152, a plant design class, has designed a 1500 square foot, three bedroom house that uses solar power and the desiccant. "Students have to learn to design," said Callihan, "so they may as well design a solar heat and cooler." The house design and use of the desiccant are original and can actually be used. The cost of the house (after income tax breaks) comes to roughly $62,000, about $6,000 more than conventionally temperature controlled homes of the same design and size. At this time, the desiccant is very expensive," explains Callihan. "But with rising fuel costs, it may become feasible for everyone." Right now the desiccant has a payoff period of around seventeen years according to today's prices. This time period may be shortened as the supply of oil dwindles more and more. Dr. Callihan and university officials are in the process of patenting his discovery so that it will become available for use in the near future.

J. Wozniak

R. Scherzmann

Nuclear Science

Roger Staves, a graduate student with a major in fisheries and a minor in nuclear science, is studying the feasibility of cleaning up industrial waste water with floating aquatic vegetation. His research deals with chromium uptake by duckweed. Staves chose chrome because it is present in the waste water of many industries in the Baton Rouge area. Few experiments of this nature have been done with chrome.

Three species of duckweed and five different concentrations of chrome solution are being used in this experiment. Chrome, being a heavy metal, does not volatilize. Chrome accumulates in the duckweed in concentrations much greater than in water alone.

The duckweed is then collected and placed in test tubes, then dried. The amount of radioactive chrome present in the samples is counted by an automatic gamma counter at the Veterinary Medicine building. The wastes are then stored.

D. Zietz

D. Zietz

Since chromium has a short half-life of twenty-seven days, radioactive chromium wastes can be disposed of normally after ten half-lives, or nine months.

Instructional Resources. The name conjures up images of dull slide shows, faulty tape recordings and flickering 35mm films.

But the Instructional Resources program at the Veterinary School does more than provide instructional services for the faculty. The program, under the direction of Dr. Daniel Hillmann, who also teaches anatomy, offers the classic classroom services of loaning slide and motion picture projectors. It also provides a supportive function via its illustrative services. The center hires Civil Service photographers and artists to prepare slides, transparencies and other graphics the professors have ordered to enhance their lectures. Another aspect of its illustrative services is to videotape pre-operative procedures so the students will be able to start operations faster.

So far these services have been free to the vet faculty, but Hillmann says a price booklet is being prepared. He adds that the department just wants to recover material costs . . . they are not out to make a profit.

When asked if he thought TV might become the new teacher, Dr. Hillmann laughed and said that even though it makes the job easier for the faculty and students, someone has to produce the program and turn on the machines.

Instructional Resources is also the Vet School's public relations agent. Remember the spots that are used at half-time on the televised football games? Recording Services, along with the Vet School's Instructional Resources, produced those fine 30-second spots.

The 1979-1980 Board of Supervisors had a rather calm year. However, emotions were aroused when a resolution was proposed by Sheldon Beychok calling for all Iranians attending LSU to "search their collective consciences and determine whether they should remain in this country, or return home where they can participate in their nation's revolution."

Emotion was also deeply felt when the board was called upon to select a second head football coach after its first appointee, Robert E. Rein, died in a plane crash in January. Jerry Stovall was appointed to the position at a special board meeting.

A new curriculum in dance leading to a Bachelor of Science Degree was also adopted by the board.

In April, the Board abolished the on-campus housing requirement. However, the board ruled, students with less than 30 semester hours living on campus must participate in the campus meal plan.

To improve attendance, the board now meets at other LSU campuses, not just in Baton Rouge, as done previously.

Favorite Professor Dr. Karl Roider

"I teach history to make students more aware of what's going on around them; to make them examine their thoughts and beliefs" says Dr. Karl Roider. Roider, an associate professor who has been at LSU for eleven years, was raised in Ada, Ohio. He first studied at Yale, then Stanford, where he received his doctorate. Dr. Roider is married, the father of three young children, and avid collector of Lionel electric trains. He belongs to the Lionel Collector's Club, which has about seven thousand members nationwide.

When asked why he chose to major in history, he replied, "I liked it. I wanted to go into aeronautical engineering, but had trouble with math." His interest in German history prompted him to specialize in eighteenth-century Hapsburg Austria.

Dr. Roider was surprised when he was informed that he had been chosen LSU's favorite professor. His formula for success? "There are, I guess, three things students like in a professor," he answered. "First, lectures have to be well organized. They have to get to some point. Secondly, you should say something. Students often know when a teacher is giving them a bunch of bull, although some like it because they believe they will get high grades with no work. In the long run, I don't think that most of them appreciate it. And thirdly, you must have personality; act as though you enjoy the subject. You have to have pride in what you do."

J. Zietz

J. Zietz

The only thing that disappoints him about teaching is when a class does not react. "I get depressed when I see a class of two hundred students in Western Civilization (freshman history), but when I don't get any response from them, it's even worse," he commented.

It is for this reason that he teaches his senior course 7:30 in the morning. "Those who really interested in the subject don't mind the time, Roider philosophizes." "We're a small group, and we have a good class."

LSU-34 Wake Forest-10

All the pre-season polls said virtually the same thing . . . the LSU Tigers, in Head Coach Charles McClendon's final season, would finish around fifth in the SEC and bow out with a mediocre 6-5 record.

For a while, it looked like the Tigers would make a all the predictors look like fools . . . let 'em go back to their ouija boards and think this one over.

But as it turned out, Jimmy the Greek and the rest of the bunch were holding the right cards. Too many injuries, a tough schedule and the inability to hold onto the football at the right times allowed the tigers to finish exactly 6-5 in the regular season, with an unexpected 34-10 win over Wake Forest in the Tangerine Bowl tacked onto the end of the 1979 season.

When LSU traveled to Boulder, Colorado for the season-opener, the Tigers enjoyed all the laughs with a record-setting 44-0 over the slow Colorado Buffalos. Freshman Jess Myles scored two touchdowns while the Tiger offense outgained the Buffs 379-130 yards.

The next week in the home opener, nobody was surprised when the Tigers cooked Rice, 47-3. The Owls had a tradition of staying asleep the whole game.

That contest was a mere warm-up for what has been called "probably the greatest game ever played in Tiger Stadium." Into town rode Number one ranked Southern California . . . yes, the mighty Trojans, a team with a history of running backs that did nasty thing to opponents . . . like gain consistently over 1,000 yards in a season . . . This year, it was no different as the Trojans had one Charles White on their side, a hard-charging senior tailback who ran behind a wall of monster linemen.

For 59 minutes and 28 seconds the Tigers acted like those monsters were cartoon characters. LSU led USC, 12-10, with 4:16 left in the game. Then USC started its final drive. On third and nine at the USC 36, LSU's Demetri Williams decked Trojan quarterback Paul McDonald for a substantial loss. But somehow, the officials came up with the idea that the Tigers' Benjy Thibodeaux had grabbed McDonald's facemask long enough to warrant a 15-yard penalty.

It was all the Trojans needed to score the winning touchdown. "We left our guts out there on the field," said LSU's emotional senior center John Ed Bradley, one of many Tigers who cried over the close loss.

Nobody expected the tigers to be up for the following game, Florida, and they weren't. LSU looked sluggish in putting away a weak Florida team, 20-3.

When the Tigers went to Georgia to play "between the hedges" in Sanford Stadium, LSU was a decided favorite over a Bulldog team that had looked sub-par all year. Unfortunately for the Tigers, Georgia decided to start playing up to its potential, and the Tigers fell, 21-14.

Before the Kentucky game at home, linebacker Jerry Hill decided something needed to be done to wake up his teammates. So, he shaved his head into a Mohican style. Other teammates followed him and soon the Tigers were on the warpath, scoring 13 fourth-quarter points to register a 23-19 comeback victory over the Wildcats.

The next week against Florida State, a heavy passing attack from Seminole quarterback Jimmy Jordan scalped the Tigers, 23-19, on regional TV.

Against Ole Miss the following week in Jackson, LSU spotted the Rebel leads of 17 and 10 points before making another one of their patented comebacks for a 28-24 win over their Mississippi arch-rivals.

In McClendon's final meeting against his old coach, Alabama's Bear Bryant, the Tigers again faced a team that was ranked No. 1 in the nation. On a rainy, cold night in Tiger Stadium, the Tiger defense held the Tide out of the end zone, but a 27-yard Alan McElroy third-quarter field goal was enough for Alabama to win, 3-0.

The Tigers regrouped enough to give their head coach, Charlie Mac, a victory in his 117th and final game in Tiger Stadium, as the Tigers handled Mississippi State, 21-3. Before the game, LSU Athletic Director Paul Dietzel gave McClendon a maroon Cadillac to show the university's appreciation for his 18 faithful years of service. Afterwards, LSU accepted a bid to play in the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Florida, on December 22 against Wake Forest, the surprise team of the nation.

However, a bigger surprise awaited the Tigers the next week in the Superdome against Tulane. A regional TV audience watched the Green Wave, behind Roch Hontas' 248 passing yards and three touchdowns, wipe out the lethargic Tigers, 24-13.

A week later, LSU Athletic Director Paul Dietzel named Bo Rein of North Carolina State as head football coach to succeed McClendon. While Rein was out recruiting, McClendon and his outgoing staff were preparing for the Tangerine Bowl.

All the preparation in the world couldn't have topped McClendon's final pre-game speech to his team before the Tigers went out to face their opponents in Orlando. "I really don't know how to start," Mac said. "I've never asked or done anything for myself and I'm not going to start now. I owe a lot to my coaches; I'd give my left and right arm for them. Tonight I want you to do the same."

Tears were in McClendon's eyes as he finished. Many players wept, overcome with emotion.

Then the crying belonged to Wake Forest as the Tigers demolished the Deacons, 34-10.

After it was all over, the Tiger football program seemed to settle into normalcy. Rein and his staff were working overtime, playing catch-up on recruiting.

Working overtime was how Coach Rein met his tragic death on January 11. While returning from Shreveport after a recruiting trip, the plane carrying pilot Lew Benscotter and him inexplicably flew 1,000 miles off-course and crashed into the Atlantic Ocean in the early hours of January 11. Many speculated that a failure in the oxygen system had killed Rein and Benscotter long before the plane ran out of gas.

A day later, LSU Athletic Director Paul Dietzel named former LSU All-America choice and current Varsity Club coordinator Jerry Stovall as head coach.

It was the end of one of the most emotional years in LSU football history.

Goodbye, Charlie Mac

A cluttered desk, half-filled boxes, a stuffed tiger and a statue of a man with a packed suitcase stood vigil in Coach Charles McClendon's office during his final days.

Coach Mac was initiated into LSU football as an assistant under Coach Gaynell Tinsley in 1953. He served as defensive coach under Paul Dietzel until taking over the head coaching position after the 1961 season. McClendon led his Fighting Tigers to an overall record of 139 wins, 59 losses, and 7 ties. But even winners lose sometime.

Practices, games and those Sunday afternoon movies took up much of his time. Mac's wife, Dorothy Faye, helped him through it all. Mac said his wife made being a coach easy.

He loved every team he coached. McClendon was very proud of the many ex-LSU football players who became doctors and dentists, and kept pictures of them in his office. "But I felt that this (his last) football squad gave more than they had to offer," said Mac. "I'm going

J. Weznik

J. Zietz

J. Zietz

to miss the association with the players more than anything."

Mac spent so much time walking from his office to the practice field that he never really saw much of the campus or the students. But he liked what he did see. "The growth of the campus helped greatly in recruiting," said McClendon. "The university's academic facilities made it easy for many young athletes to choose LSU as their university."

Mac draws many fond memories from his years at LSU. His most exciting moments as head coach were the Cotton Bowl against Texas, the Cotton Bowl against Arkansas, and the 1971 victory over Notre Dame. As for his worst moments, Mac simply said, "when we lost."

Mac loved LSU. Mac loved the fans. But Mac always called the band "our best friends." When the Tiger Band cheered and played the Fight Song in the stands, Coach Mac said chills ran through him.

Mac said he never made a sacrifice, and always kept football at LSU foremost and Charlie Mac second. He enjoyed coaching football, and was just as excited the last time he was on the field as the first time he wore the head coach cap.

But the man who never made a sacrifice will no longer run through the goalposts into Death Valley as the leader of the Tigers.

Editor's Note — Coach Mac is now serving as executive director of the Tangerine Sports Association in Orlando, Florida.

Predicted as possibly the best LSU team ever, the Tigers wasted no time in living up to their advance billing by opening the season with eight straight wins. The first was a season-opening SEC rout of Florida, 112-81, and the second, a 56-55 defeat of nationally-ranked Arkansas at Little Rock.

Then the Tigers ran into a stumbling block which had surprised them a year before. The heavily-favored Bengals were once again left perplexed by a mediocre Vanderbilt team in Nashville. The fourth-ranked Tigers appeared confused and slow afoot as the Commodores recorded a 77-66 upset. A few grumblings arose but those disappeared quickly when LSU blasted highly-regarded Mississippi State, 80-85, in their next outing. Once again it seemed that the Tigers could not lose, but nothing was farther from the truth, as was observed in back-to-back SEC upsets to Alabama and Georgia.

It was obvious from the start that LSU did not have its mind on basketball when Alabama came to town, and the Tide hustled its way to a 57-56 televised victory. Another TV game followed at Athens versus Georgia, the dark horse of the league, and this time it was the Tigers' inability to hit free throws down the stretch that cost them a 73-72 double overtime verdict. Suddenly the defending SEC champions found themselves buried in ninth place in the league play with a 2-3 mark — and the toughest games still to come.

The Tigers probably could have folded, but instead made a remarkable turnabout which would eventually find them winning 17 of their remaining 20 games. A 93-82 victory over Auburn preceded a giant battle at Knoxville with league-leading Tennessee.

The Vols, who surprised everyone by winning the conference tournament in 1979, had begun 1980 where they left off and had marched to a 7-0 league start. However, LSU was once again playing like champions and dealt the Vols a 75-74 defeat. This time the Tigers hit their free throws with superb efforts from Scales, Martin and Macklin aiding in the triumph. The next day LSU went to Chicago to meet top-ranked DePaul in a TV game and lost a tough one, 78-73. Seconds into the contest, Durand Macklin sprained an ankle and did not see action for the rest of the day.

Moving back into SEC play, LSU whipped Ole Miss and Florida, then came face-to-face with No. 3 Kentucky in Lexington. The powerful Wildcats had already disposed of nationally-ranked Indiana and Notre Dame, and were now the top team in SEC play. The Tigers, however, were not awed by Kentucky's laurels, and played a perfect game to win, 65-60. In a few short weeks LSU had moved from the ninth position in league standings to the No. 1 spot, along with Kentucky. The Tigers also went from No. 10 to No. 6 in the AP poll.

LSU then disposed of Vanderbilt in a revenge match, 83-81, Mississippi State, 75-63, and Alabama at Tuscaloosa for the first time since 1968, 68-66. The victory over the Tide did not come easily. After blowing a 15 point lead early in the second half, LSU managed to fall behind, 63-58 with time running out. Then working with magic hands, Ethan Martin and Willie Sims literally stole the game away from 'Bama and forced a 66-66 tie at the end of regulation. In the overtime period, the Tigers used their deadly four corners offense to shave all but four seconds off the clock. Sims then calmly sank a pair of free throws and the Tigers were again victorious.

LSU won its next four games (three of which were televised) by alternating its fast game with the slow one. At home against Georgia, the Tigers ran the Bulldogs ragged enroute to a 96-77 victory, sweet revenge for the earlier loss. Then at Auburn, the Tigers stalled the ball for a great deal of the second half and won, 50-44. In Baton Rouge, Tennessee fell 73-66 as did Ole Miss at Oxford, 77-74, setting up the SEC title collision between the league's two powers — LSU and Kentucky.

Baton Rouge was at a fever pitch. Students camped on the ramps of the Assembly Center a day before the game to assure themselves of getting seats. On Sunday the "Deaf Dome" was rocking with 13,937 fans, plus millions more watching on national television. LSU jumped ahead in the first half, but cold shooting kept them from opening the game up. The 'Cats came back in the second half and burned the nets to grab a substantial lead, but LSU staged a miraculous rally in the final seconds to take a 74-72 lead. Kentucky then tied it and forced overtime. In the overtime, the only points scored came as the horn sounded when Kyle Macy hit a 15-foot jumper to give the Wildcats the SEC regular season championship, 76-74, over the stunned Tigers. But the season was far from over.

The SEC Tournament at Birmingham began a few days later, and brackets were set up so that if LSU and Kentucky could get past their opening games, they would again meet for the tournament title. LSU easily took care of Florida, 95-82, and dominated Alabama, 73-66, while Kentucky held up its end by beating Auburn and Ole Miss. So once again the premier teams of the SEC would meet.

Birmingham was mired in a winter snowstorm and the horrid weather conditions allowed only 8,400 to attend the championship game on Saturday night. Everyone else was forced to stay at home and watch the Tigers and the 'Cats on TV. The game was more than anyone could have asked for as both teams shot brilliantly down the stretch. The Tigers, however, shone brighter, and captured the SEC Tourney Crown with a 80-78 win. The win marked LSU's fifth in the last seven meetings with Kentucky. Scales was named the SEC Tournament Most Valuable Player. LSU won without the help of Rick Mattick, the senior center, who quit the team after the Tigers' last home game.

It was on to the NCAA Tournament for the Tigers, now rated second nationally and with all the confidence in the world. LSU's first victim was Alcorn State, with a 27-game winning streak. The Tigers scalped the Braves, 98-88. Next came Missouri in Houston. After a poor first half, the Tigers rallied to take a 68-63 decision before a virtual home crowd. The Bengals suddenly found themselves as the favorite to capture the NCAA title, but they still had to win three more games to do it. Unfortunately, LSU never gave themselves the chance. Against Louisville, not even the famous "L-S-U" cheer could help the Tigers, and the Cardinals overwhelmed the stunned LSU team, 86-66.

Though the season was over, the Tigers were to suffer two more defeats. The first was forward DeWayne Scales' decision to forego his senior season and instead play pro ball. A month later, LSU lost its chief recruiter and top assistant coach when Art Tolis accepted the head coaching job at the University of Tennessee at Martin. Rich Hucabay, formerly a part-time assistant coach, was appointed to take over the full-time assistant coaching position vacated by Tolis.

Baseball . . .

After surprising the experts with a strong 34-20 team in 1979, the 1980 baseball team again confounded the prognosticators. A strong favorite to take the SEC title, the Bengals never seriously threatened in the race which was eventually won by Vanderbilt. Instead, LSU produced a mediocre 23-19 ledger overall and wound up with a second 8-9 SEC record.

Men's Tennis

M. Trabant

The year 1980 was one of disappointment for the LSU tennis team. The Tigers, who emerged as a national power in the mid-1970s, had to struggle through the 1980 campaign even with senior stars Mike Oransky, Mark Shoptaugh and Drew Meyers. Overall, LSU finished 14-10, with inconsistency plaguing the Tigers throughout. However, in the SEC Tournament, the Bengals put together a strong effort and made a race for the title, only to settle for a close third place.

Shoptaugh, who set an LSU career record with 94 victories, was named to the All-SEC team along with teammate Meyers, who rated second in the LSU annals with 90 individual wins.

H. Whiteside

The 1979 LSU women's volleyball team faced the new year with a team that had been stripped of its stars by graduation. After posting 43-9 and 30-4 marks and winning successive SEC titles, the Tigers could muster only enough energy to produce an 11-15 record.

A large group photograph of the 1966-67 Homecoming Court members. The group consists of 40 young women, arranged in approximately six rows on a wide set of stone steps. They are posed outdoors, with a dense line of tall, leafy trees in the background. The women are dressed in mid-1960s fashion, featuring a variety of sleeve styles, necklines, and patterns. Many are smiling at the camera. The photograph is in black and white, with a slightly aged appearance.

Editor's Note

This book, unlike many GUMBOs, is the result of team effort. Everyone on the staff contributed ideas, opinions and time. Judge for yourself the quality of the book we produced.

In closing, I would like to thank the special people who are as much a part of the book as the pages: Mike, who always managed to squeeze just one more picture into his layouts; Jim "Better Late Than Never" Zietz, who taught me the difference between a fair snapshot and an excellent picture; Woz, who somehow managed to keep track of all of those last minute assignments; Mary, who was so resourceful; and Toni, without whose typing we never would have made a deadline.

The list of those who helped in many and various ways goes on and on . . .

Specifications

The views expressed are those of the GUMBO staff and not necessarily those of the students, faculty or staff of LSU-BR. All material printed in this book is the work of LSU students (unless otherwise noted).

The 1980 GUMBO was printed by Hunter Publishing Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, with Rod Hunter as the representative. Color reproduction-grade prints were processed by Meisel Photochrome Corporation, Dallas, Texas. Class portraits were taken by Stevens Studios, Quincy, Massachusetts.

Color transparency films used were Kodak Kodachrome 25 and 64 and Ektachrome 64, 160, 200, and 400. Most pictures were taken on Kodak Tri-X film. Other films used were Kodak Panatomic-X and Plus-X, Ilford Pan F, FP4 and HP5, and Agfa 100 and 400. The main developer used was D-76, diluted 1:1. Most prints were made on Kodak Polycontrast II RC paper.

Cameras used were the Canon F1, AT1, AE1, FTb and TL, the Hasselblad 500 CM and 500 ELM, the Kodak Retina Reflex IV, the Leica M2, M3, M5, M4-2 and Leicaflex SL, the Minolta SRT 101, SRT 200, and XG7, the Mamiya M645, and DSX 500, the Nikon F2A, FE, FM, and Nikkormat, the Olympus OM1 and OM2, the Rolleiflex twin lens reflex and SL35E, and a Russian Zorki Camera.

The press run for the 1980 GUMBO was 14,500, 504 pages in each copy. The paper is 9 x 12 inch long bound glossy, with black ink. The end sheets are Brown Parchtone. All headlines are set in Times Roman, body copy in either Caledonia or Optima. The paper is 80 pound Champion Javelin Offset.

The cover is printed by a four-color process on a lithographic cloth case, 160 point hardback binders board.

No part of this book may be reprinted without the express written permission of the editor or the Office of Student Media, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, Louisiana, 70803.
